

Contents

The praise of transgression	3
REPETITIONS
Krystyna Latawiec Sanok and Brugge – the peripheral towns of Marian Pankowski	9
CONTINUATIONS AND REVISIONS
Beata Garlej The limits of aesthetic concretization determined by the composition: introductory deliberations	23
Dorota Utracka Transgression and liminality of a text. Between the aesthetics of a fragment and the "carnival" of the transmedia	36
Małgorzata Nieszczerczewska Vanitas . Ruin as an (un)limited space	68
Adrian Gleń The limits of literary knowledge. On some new theories of interdisciplinarity (including one example)	80
Agnieszka Rydz The limits of memory. The poetry of Wisława Szymborska	91
Joanna Lisek "Papirene brik" (The Paper Bridge) – the poetry as the crossing of the identity boundaries in the early Kadia Molodowsky's output	108
Małgorzata Chrobak „And who needs the street like that and the tram to nowhere?” „Palimpsest places” in the guidebooks and city walk books for children	126
DEBUTS
Katarzyna Bielewicz The corporal limitations in „Morfina” written by Szczepan Twardoch	143
Dawid Kieres Periphrasable-metaphorical tombstone inscriptions from the polish cemetery in Adampol (Turkey)	156

PARATEXTS AND COMMENTS

Jakub Knap
Apotropeion or the romantic tales of the afterlife (by the fireplace)	169
Marcin Piątek
Warsaw without borders. Following the footsteps of Miron Białoszewski	175
Katarzyna Wądolny-Tatar
Epigenesis of trauma	181
Magdalena Roszczyńska
Places, non-places, different spaces. A draft to the topocentric culture history project	186
Justyna Krzysiek
Borders of childhood. The literary-culture infantilizations conference (Cracov, 25–26 June 2015)	190